

Year 3K

There will be no year 3000. Or maybe there will be but without human race. Probably, in few months there will be USA vs. Iraq war. It might turn into the Third World War or even First Nuclear War.

After this a lot of the people will die directly from nuclear bombs or from radiation. People who will survive will die because of lack of food and water. Radioactive dust will cover the sun. Because of lack of light, plants will die. Then herbivorous animals, and at the and carnivorous creatures including people. To make matters worse, all water except deep-water will be radiated. And there will be too few people to obtain it.

So, the only life forms that will survive will be protozoa in deep-sea water. And as far as I don't believe in evolution theory they will not be able to evaluate in higher life forms.

There is second possibility. Nuclear war can be so huge, that it will destroy Earth. Not directly, but bombs may create huge seismic toss. It will destroy earth's crust. No living organism will be able to live on it.

There is third (but less probable) possibility. There will be no war. But people will annihilate themselves even so. Directly or no but they will. I don't believe that people can survive until year 3000. I'm sure that they will kill each other or they will destroy natural environment.

So whatever will happen, there will be no human race in 31st century.
